The merging of two rival schools could be a difficult task. When it was announced Briarwood and Headland were to be combined, the student bodies from both schools experienced mixed emotions about how things would go. After the school year began however, it was realized how smoothly the transition could take place. A new spirit of togetherness was formed uniting both Highlanders and Buccanears into Warriots.

School spirit was another display of happiness. Friends compaigning for student office, yelling at pep railies, and supporting the football team, combined helped to areare an element of friendship. After all, happiness consists of having friends.

Preparing Woodland's first yearbook was an enormous task. At the beginning of the year we did not know each other well so it took some time to establish good working relations be tween us and the staff. After that, we began to to see the challenge presented to us to produce a quality yearbook that would set the standards for years to come.

"His sun went down in the morning.
White all was fair and bright.
But "twas not an eclipse of darkness.
That hid him from our sight.

For the valley of death was brighter.
Than the hills of life he trod.
And the peace that fell on his spirit.
Was the caim, deep peace of God.

His sun went down in the marning,
While all was fair and bright
But it shines today on the far-away hills in the land that knows no night."
